MR. CARL WEBER.*WOLLONGONG, Monday.

The death has occurred of Mr. Carl Weber, at his residence, Reids town, Wollongong. An engineer and surveyor by profession in the early days he was associated with the Gold Commissioner at Braidwood and Hill End, and carried out surveys for goldfield claims. He moved to the North Coast, where he laid out the road from Kempsey to Armidale, which is regarded as a fine piece of engineering work. He was road superintendent for the Government at Glen Innes, and then went to the Illawarra district, where as Government road superintendent he had charge of the district from Sydney to Moruya. He subsequently supervised work for the Government at Bega. About 35 years ago he settled in the Wollongong district, with the object of following the profession of a surveyor, and was associated with the initial surveys of the Sydney water supply at the back of the mountains. He was responsible for carrying out the survey of the coastal road from Clifton to Stanwell Park, and the work of construction was carried out under his supervision, men having to be lowered over the cliff to carry out the initial excavations. The first look-out at Bulli Pass was also carried out under his supervision, and was for a long time called Weber's Look Out. He also surveyed the top portion of the Macquarie Pass. Born at London in 1853, the late Mr. Weber came to Australia at an early age with his father, the late Mr. Adalbert Arnold Weber, who was also an engineer by profession, and who was employed by the Government shortly after his arrival in New South Wales, and for some years afterwards in laying out the roads to the goldfields.
