Mr. Justice Pring, in his summing up in the wheat cares at Goulburn, referred to the methods of business at the wheat-stacks as "slipshod." There was some-body in charge authorised to sell the wheat to anybody who liked to come along. For a long time there were no receipt forms, or other forms.

Crutching is proceeding on many of the holdings in Wagga and adjoining districts, I to avoid loss from fly pest. Flies are numerous in some centres, and Inspector Lyne recently inspected sheep which had been attacked, and found them suffering severely from the effects of the fly. Crutching is looked upon as one of the most reliable methods of warding off attacks.

From all parts of the Wagga district come reports of loss owing to the presence of foxes. At no time have foxes been more numerous than at present, and many rabbit trappers are adding to their income by shooting and trapping foxes. In three days last week two men went out from Wagga and secured 60 foxes, the skins of which, it is estimated, are worth up to 10/ each. On one holding 38 carcases were counted for one night's poisoning.

After several days of secret negotiation between the Premier of South Australia, Mr. Peake, and the Treasurer, Sir Richard Butler, regarding the continuance of Sir Richard Butler in the Ministry, in view of the adverse finding of the Angus wheat commission, light was thrown on the situation on Wednesday by the Premier's intimation that Sir Richard Butler had been asked to resign from the Cabinet. The most sensational part of the crisis is that he refused to do so.

In the Hay District Court, Jos. S. M'Culloch, of Carrathool proceeded against Cattanach, an adjoining holder, claiming £400 damages for the trespass of defendant's sheep and rams on plaintiff's farm and paddock, whereby plaintiff suffered a loss of grass, and also a loss through his ewes lambing out of season. The jury awarded plaintiff a verdict of 1. No costs were allowed.
